Dust settles on the rails of this busy subway station for mere seconds before it is kicked up again by the sound of the next oncoming shuttle. People scurry along through tunnels and doors to find a nice oily ripped seat before all of the good ones are taken. The sound of the alarm lets everyone know that the shuttle will be departing shortly. Without hesitation the doors slam shut and the underground train zips away... but still lingering in the tunnels are the scum who would stand against justice and that which is right... and there to oppose them are the unlawful heroes that the surface dwellers would label as mere vigilantes.
